Reginald Alexander had always dedicated his life to helping others. He joined the Public Health Service in an inner city clinic. At 30, he went to medical school and became a physician.

Reginald Alexander

And in 1993, he went to work at the VA Hospital in Des Moines, Iowa, where he directed rehabilitation programs for substance abusers and the homeless. But then, six years ago, Dr. Alexander saw life through the patient's eyes. When a car struck him and his wife, they each spent a month in the hospital and endured years of rehabilitative therapy, learning to walk again. For most, this would be a life-altering setback. For Dr. Alexander, it was a rededication. With a deeper sense of empathy for his patients than ever before, he took over the role of State Surgeon for the state of Iowa. And recently received the prestigious Legion of Merit medal from the National Guard for his work, in spiration and many years of distinguished service.

HappyFeet Programs

Little Toes

(Ages 2-3)

No two sessions are alike. All children have a ball. Every session is fresh and dynamic! Your little one will participate in exciting stories, creative songs, nursery rhymes and fun games that trigger the imagination. Each child becomes "a soccer star in an imagined movie." This captivating approach teaches your toddler advanced motor skills.

Big Toes

(Ages 4-5)

In this stage we introduce your child to key concepts and new skills, cooperation and goal setting. Your child learns valuable lessons for all areas of life. All children have a ball for maximum skill. We make use of fun props and play more advanced games. The kids learn some of the most difficult shots & moves in soccer. Your child will have fun and develop creative motor skills in a non-competitive way.

HappyFeet/Legends

(Ages 6, 7, 8 & 9)

Each session involves creative soccer activities with a ball. HappyFeet/Legends players learn to perform some of soccer's most difficult moves and goal scoring techniques with opposition. Your protégé is gradually exposed to manageable pressure to enhance deceptive dribbling and ball striking skills. In this crucial stage your prodigy develops the will to embrace intelligent risk. Your child also learns the self-belief to be a playmaker and ball wizard.

THE LORD OF THE RINGS

Filming J.R.R. Tolkien's epic Lord of the Rings trilogy was an epic undertaking in and of itself. Starting in October 1999, filming continued for more than a year throughout director Peter Jackson's native New Zealand. Shooting three movies in sequence (The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring, The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers and The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King) was an unprecedented feat, but Jackson insisted on the back-to-back-to-back schedule. "I felt that in order to do the tale's epic nature justice, we had to shoot it as one big story because that's what it is," Jackson says. "It's three movies that will take you through three very unique experiences, but it all adds up to one unforgettable story." Telling that familiar story on film required near-heroic efforts from cast members, who had to forego the usual on-set luxury of lounging around in their trailers between takes. Producer Barrie M. Osborne (The Matrix) says, "The Lord of the Rings required a commitment from our cast to learn how to sword fight, horseback ride, canoe, learn Elvish [a language], climb mountain peaks and, at the same time, bring the magic and magnetism of Tolkien's characters to the screen. They were up to the task."

To teach the cast various fencing techniques, producers brought in Bob Anderson, the world's top sword master, who has consulted on films such as Star Wars. Anderson studied Tolkien's novels before developing fencing methods for each Middle Earth culture - Hobbits, Dwarves, Elves, Wizards and Humans - then handed the swords, axes and other weapons to the actors so they could test their mettle at fighting. To endure the grueling training schedule, the cast had to be in peak physical condition before they began filming. Once on the set, they had to have enough stamina to climb mountains, scale castle walls, ford streams, charge through forests on horseback and fight intense battles.

"We all started fitness programs well before production began, and we worked with physical trainers throughout," explains Dominic Monaghan, who plays the Hobbit Merry (one of Frodo's close friends). "Not only was the shoot physically challenging, with huge leaps and big battles and stuff like that, but the hours alone required physical conditioning and fitness. Anybody out of shape wouldn't have made it."

A willingness to tough it out was a must to survive this marathon shoot. Perhaps nobody on the set embodied that dedication more than Viggo Mortensen, who plays Aragorn. Of the actor's commitment, producer Osborne says, "He's the kind of actor who one day had his tooth knocked out by a sword and actually asked if they could super glue it back on so he could finish the scene." See what we mean about near-heroic efforts?

Estimated savings are based upon assumptions and approximations. Actual energy savings may differ from those presented in this program due to variation in individual energy use habits and home characteristics. In addition, the total energy savings from the installation of more than one recommendation may be less than the sum of the energy savings of recommendation's installed individually.

The range of estimation costs is based on average market price of acceptable products. The price may vary depending on your location, selection of contractors, and/or the particular product you choose to install. Cost do not include modifications or adaptations unique to you particular home.

The procedures used to make these estimates are consistent with the U.S. Department of Energy criteria for residential audits. However, the actual cost incurred and energy savings realized from implementing these measures may be different from the estimates in this program. Although the estimates are based on measurements of your home, they are also based on assumptions which may not be correct with your energy use patterns.
